Re: City of Indio Response to the Grand Jury Report Dated June 17, 2014

Dear Judge Cope:

This letter is in response to the 2013-2014 Grand Jury Report entitled “Impact of AB 109 upon Riverside County Municipal Police Agencies” dated June 17, 2014 (“Report”). The Grand Jury has asked for a written response to the following Findings and Recommendations contained in the report pursuant to Penal Code Section 933 et seq.

By way of background, on October 1, 2011, the State of California implemented AB 109, realigning the state corrections system. It is California’s solution for reducing the number of inmates in the state’s 33 prisons to 137.5 percent design capacity by May 2013, as ordered by the three-judge court and affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court. The law mandated that individuals in state custody for non-serious, non-violent, non-sex offenses (“N3”) would be released under county-directed Post-Release Community Supervision (“PRCS”), requiring county probation departments in California to oversee compliance. While the intent of realignment was to relieve over-crowding within the state prisons, the immediate impact at the county level was overwhelming. No inmates in the state prison were transferred to county jails or released early. However, many prisoners who were released on parole had their parole overseen by the county’s PRCS probation department instead of the state parole agency.

Most newly convicted N3 felons in Riverside County (“County”) are now sentenced to county jail instead of state prison. Due to limited space in Riverside County’s five jails, the Riverside County Sheriff (“Sheriff”) released many N3 felons from the jails under PRCS. Riverside County Probation Department ("Probation"), as the agency responsible for PRCS, realized the increased caseload strained available resources. Probation is also responsible for the Mandatory Supervision ("MS") population. These are offenders who can no longer be sentenced to state prison when convicted of certain felonies.

The County's Community Corrections Partnership ("CCP") Executive Committee ("CCPEC"), charged with development of a 2011 Realignment Implementation, recognized the need for local law enforcement participation in the oversight of these new "AB 109 probationers." The CCPEC allocated AB 109 funding, $1.4 million, to form a Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team ("PACT"). The primary mission of PACT is to "work with Probation to immediately focus on high-risk and at-large Post-Release Community Supervision ("PRCS") offenders that pose the most risk to public safety." PACT is made up of several municipal police officers to partner with the Sheriff and Probation to deal with increased PRCS population released into local communities. The Chief Probation Officer is the chairman of the CCPEC and the Probation Department serves as the fiscal agent for the PACT funds.

The California Police Chiefs Association ("CPCA") began lobbying the governor to address these impacts that realignment has had on local cities and their law enforcement agencies. As a result, the Board of State and Community Corrections ("BSCC") provided additional funding to local law enforcement. The funds from the state, $1,536,156, are to be used by the Riverside County's police chief's association in any "fashion" it deemed appropriate. In Riverside County, it fell to the Association of Riverside County Chiefs of Police and Sheriff ("ARCCOPS") and selected the City of Beaumont to act as the fiscal agent for these BSCC funds. In securing these funds, all parties agreed that decisions on how to best use the funds would be made directly by the local police chiefs and sheriff. ARCCOPS agreed that the BSCC funds shall be used to enhance and improve the current PACT program funded through the CCPEC. The PACT program expanded into three regional teams throughout the County. The teams are identified as WEST-PACT, CENTRAL-PACT, and EAST-PACT. These teams are composed of numerous law enforcement officers from municipal police departments, sheriff deputies, probation officers, district attorney investigators, two police department agencies from cities contracted with the Sheriff's Department, an Alcohol Tobacco and Firearm ("ATF") agent, and on occasion U.S. Customs and Border Protection agents. Funding for the participating police departments who provide an officer and a vehicle on a PACT team will come from either the CCPEC funds distributed by Probation, or the state funds ("BSCC") held in account by the City of Beaumont.

As of the date of this response, the City has received $0 dollars to provide services for the rehabilitation of inmates and probationers sent from State custody. The City is able to submit invoices for reimbursement to the City of Beaumont Police Department for the costs associated with its EAST PACT Detective for an amount up to $200,000. The City believes the City has been a good steward of these funds and has used them to provide cost-effective services in a manner that ensures the safety of inmates, probationers and the City and its residents. The City values the Grand Jury's work in providing these findings and recommendations in the Report. While not all of the findings and recommendations apply to the City, the City appreciates the opportunity to respond to those findings and recommendations that do apply.

A. Findings

Finding 1:

Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team (PACT) Program

Investigation revealed the PACT units have allowed Probation more time and resources to focus on case management and compliance checks on individuals on probation and parole. According to several chiefs of police, the PACT units shared information, served warrants, apprehended PRCS violators and reduced the number of PRCS offenders who abscond.

Further investigation revealed that the PACT units have been highly visible and hold individuals that break the law accountable, regardless of the level of offense. The participating police departments have worked to build infrastructures that support this type of critical enforcement. The police departments stated they have a responsibility to prevent the non-compliant PRCS individuals from re-offending and victimizing the communities.

Initially, when the PACT program began, only cities with their own municipal police departments could participate in PACT activities. With the additional funding from BSCC for the PACT program, the participation of cities who contract for their police services became eligible to participate in the PACT program. Two cities in PACT that contract for police services with the Sheriff's Department are Palm Desert and Moreno Valley. Current participating cities in PACT are shown on Chart B.

In order to be reimbursed for PACT funding and state funding, each of the participating agencies must have committed a full-time sworn officer for whom they are requesting reimbursement for the officer's salary, benefits and vehicle costs. The officer must serve the PACT unit for the entire period in which the agencies are seeking reimbursement. The city must provide the vehicle. The cars that were purchased for PACT activities by several municipal police departments cost $50,000-$60,000 when fully loaded with computers, radios, and other law enforcement equipment. Verification of expenditure(s) is required prior to reimbursement from the fiscal agent. In fiscal years (FY) 2012-13 and 2013-14 the allocated amount was $200,000 for each officer/vehicle per fiscal year for PACT expenses. See Chart C for FY 2012-13 summary of actual reimbursed expenses that were requested by each city. Several cities provide more than one officer and a car, but do not request reimbursement from the fiscal agents. Chart C reflects the first full year CCPEC expenses were reimbursed. The FY for BSCC funding is still in progress.

Probation provides PRCS and Parole non-compliance information to the PACT units. These PACT units are involved in non-compliance sweeps and provided support in conjunction with other PACT units, other task force teams, and also operate in the county’s unincorporated areas. PACT member cities also support cities that do not have a PACT member on the PACT. (See Chart E)

Investigation revealed non-reimbursable costs were incurred by the cities to provide an officer to PACT activities (e.g. financial operational support, workers compensation costs and claims processing of PACT officers as well as personnel to process requests for reimbursement funds for the officers). The cities provided these auxiliary services without any compensation due to the specific guidelines between the PACT cities and Probation. Some cities provided a sergeant with a higher salary rather than a lower ranked officer with a lesser salary.

Charts A and D show the percentage of population of a city to the county’s total population versus the percentage of the total supervised individuals of a city to the total supervised population in the county. The following cities that have a significantly higher percentage of supervised individuals versus percentage of population are: Riverside, Indio, Hemet, Lake Elsinore, Perris, Palm Springs and Desert Hot Springs. All of these cities provide one or more PACT officers except the City of Perris and Lake Elsinore.

Response to Finding 1:

The City partially agrees and partially disagrees with the finding. The Riverside County law enforcement community has historically cooperated and collaborated on regional public safety issues county-wide. This is evidenced by the various multi-agency teams and task forces in place throughout Riverside County. The PACTs are such an example of this cooperation and collaboration. Initially developed as two teams, West PACT and Central PACT, this regional approach to accountability and compliance of our County-wide AB109 realignment population now includes East PACT. The development and implementation of these teams came to fruition through the CCPEC. In fact, the majority of the CCPEC is comprised of County departments and agencies with only one municipal Chief of Police representing all the municipal agencies County-wide. The decision and determination to participate on PACT was left to the respective agency head whether to choose to participate or not.
Finding 2:

Data Sharing and Supervised Offender Tracking

In February, 2012, the ARCCOPS requested that Probation regularly share PRCS offender data with the county’s 11 municipal police departments and with the Sheriff who oversees 17 contract cities and unincorporated areas of the County. This information is released minimally on a monthly basis. The list includes the offender’s name, address, city, most recent offense and probation officer contact information. The implementation of AB 109 prompted local law enforcement agencies to recognize that they have an important collaborative role to play in support of Probation’s efforts to ensure the successful reintegration of this population back into local communities. Currently, Probation provides all local law enforcement agencies a weekly PRCS “Warrant List” for non-compliant probationers as well as monthly reports on all active PRCS and MS individuals. Probation communicates daily with the PACT members as there is a full-time probation officer assigned to each of the three teams. (See Chart B)

California Penal Code §13300 (a) (b) states that the chiefs of police, as well as local law enforcement agencies, have a “need to know” for criminal history information to ensure the safety and security of their duly respective communities.

In March 2013, Probation advised the Riverside County Board of Supervisors via an Update of the local Community Corrections Partnership Public Safety Realignment and Post-release Community Supervision Implementation Plan Update of AB 109 Criminal Justice Alignment, that the Sheriff and Probation developed a joint database system that reduced labor and information technology costs.

Investigation revealed as of the date of this report, there was no county-wide updated and centralized data base for tracking PRCS, MS, and re-arrested probationers. Some police departments have developed their own stand-alone system for their city to internally track repeat offenders as well as non-compliant PRCS and MS individuals. Testimony indicated released offenders frequently travel from city to city and from county to county once they are released from jail. Further testimony indicated that “data sharing is inadequate between Probation and the municipal police departments as well as between contiguous counties,” inconsistent data sharing prevents cities and other entities impacted by AB 109 to ascertain what programs and processes are successful and which ones are not successful.

When state prisoners are paroled, a parole officer confirms the parolees’ residential address before prisoners are paroled. When the state prisoners are released from a state correction facility, all law enforcement agencies are notified statewide. If a state prisoner is released from a state facility to PRCS or MS under county probation, the county supervising agency oversees any special conditions for the prisoner’s release and notifies all law enforcement agencies. However, when a prisoner is released from a county jail on PRCS or MS, no immediate notification is made to local law enforcement agencies.

Testimony confirmed that currently, when local law enforcement detains a PRCS or MS re-offender, the arresting officer attempts to verify criminal history with the department’s “dispatch officer.” If the offender is on supervised release and a warrant has been issued for their arrest for non-compliance, they are immediately arrested and the probation officer contacted. At the time of this report the police departments did not immediately receive a formal notification from Probation or Sheriff on offenders who were just released into their cities. This release information is given to the municipal police agencies in the weekly update.

Investigation revealed one of the biggest problems the cities and the County faced when AB 109 was enacted, was that there “wasn’t any preparation for a uniform or standardized statistical tracking system.” Additional testimony revealed that data sharing is not consistent between Probation and the police departments as well as between counties because the PRCS and MS people moved around and no agency had a centralized database to keep track of these later arrests.

The California Department of Justice has developed a new program that is designed to enable public safety officers to collaborate and share information between all counties and state agencies in tracking individuals on supervised release. Probation is aware of the new program; however, it has not yet met the final data requirements, but is “actively developing measures to become ready.”

Response to Finding 2:

The City disagrees with this finding. The Sheriff’s Department and Probation communicate information on the release of PRCS and MS prisoners, albeit not through any joint Countywide database. The Indio Police Department receives at least weekly Post-Release Community Supervision Information Reports from Probation. Probation and the Sheriff’s Department also provide quarterly updates at the Coachella Valley Association of Governments meetings, which are attended by both elected and public safety representatives from every municipality in the Coachella Valley, including the City of Indio.

Finding 3:

Probation Officers at Jails

Due to overcrowding in the county jails, prisoners are released from the jails at varying times of the day. The deputy sheriffs at the jails are responsible for reviewing the terms and conditions of release which were laid down at the time of a prisoner’s sentencing. This meeting to review the terms of release with the prisoner is done at the jail. No discussion of a “case plan” while on probation is made at this time. A case plan may include follow-up meetings, evaluations needed for re-integration, residency reports and other requirements dictated by the Probation officer. The prisoner is released based on the last known address in the prisoner’s file.

The information for prisoners released on PRCS is communicated to Probation after the prisoner is released. This information includes the prisoner’s residence and contact information at the time of sentencing. There is a disconnect between the time the prisoner is released from jail and when the prisoner makes contact with Probation, sometimes more than two days. Investigation revealed that many times the prisoner's residence and contact information changed after time was served in jail. Once Probation has the released prisoner's (now probationer’s) information, it is up to the probationer to contact Probation. If the probationer has not reported into Probation, then a warrant is issued for the probationer for non-compliance of his probation for failing to report in. The warrants for non-compliant probationers are sent from Probation to the respective PACT units for follow-up, adding workload to the team.

Response to Finding 3:

The City partially agrees and partially disagrees with the finding. This finding involves staffing, operations and deployment decisions of Probation and the Sheriff's Departments, and the City would defer to their determinations regarding the management of their respective departments.

Finding 4:

Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC)

According to Grand Jury investigation the County’s public safety radio network is obsolete and does not reach newer neighborhoods. Today, County law enforcement and other safety officers use the radio more frequently to talk and send data. The Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC) system, recently launched by the Sheriff, has expanded prior coverage and built radio links to other agencies that support the public and safety agencies. This system is not used in all cities in Riverside County.

The new communication system is more comprehensive than the existing systems.
When AB 109 was enacted, the public safety agencies throughout the County began seeing an increase in law enforcement activities. Many cities reported a sharp increase in property crimes and a decrease in violent crimes. Criminals and re-offenders crossed city boundaries and often County boundaries. In some areas, the improved communication system of PSEC enabled faster apprehension and arrests of these offenders. Many of the local law enforcement agencies within the County are still using radios with different frequencies and different bands than their neighboring communities. The resultant lack of contact with neighboring law enforcement agencies and counties has resulted in numerous unsuccessful operations. Communication among some County agencies is often lost due to patchwork coverage.

Grand Jury investigation revealed that the PACT was active in the recent pursuit of accused officer Christopher Dorner. WEST-PACT provided communication equipment for many Riverside personnel involved in the investigation and pursuit. This additional equipment allowed Riverside County personnel to communicate with San Bernardino agencies. During the pursuit, many agencies who followed this suspect only had cell phones to call in their location and/or status to local police agencies.

All PACT officers have the PSEC system. However, at the time of this report, non-PACT officers in Palm Springs, Desert Hot Springs, Cathedral City and Murrieta did not have PSEC accessibility. This digital network, which handles voice and data transmissions, has roughly tripled the number of radio towers of the prior analog system and provides coverage to 95 percent of the County, compared to 60 percent under the old network.

Investigation showed that portions of Riverside County currently operate on an 800 MHz radio system that is lacking in full coverage and functionality. Population growth within the County has necessitated the expansion of the coverage footprint. Several smaller cities often have no wide-area coverage. Sometimes different departments in the same city are out of contact.

The Riverside County Information Technology Department oversaw the PSEC rollout, which took seven years to achieve. Many cities that contract with the Sheriff for police services have PSEC, although non-contract cities have limited accessibility to PSEC in event of emergencies.

Response to Finding 4:

The City disagrees with this finding. The City participates in the Eastern Riverside County Interoperable Communications Authority ("ERICA") which has the ability to "patch" with the Riverside PSEC. This patch is utilized frequently to allow for interoperability between the County and ERICA agencies as needed. The other ERICA partners include the cities of Beaumont, Palm Springs, Cathedral City and Desert Hot Springs, and all have the ability to patch as needed and necessary. The best example of the patch working on a large scale operation would be during the annual Coachella and Stagecoach Concert Series in the City of Indio.
Finding 5:

Transitional Housing

In the past two years, approximately 4,500 prisoners have been released from the County jails on some type of supervised release. Investigation revealed that when an inmate had problems with housing, physical or mental issues, it resulted in difficulty in re-entering a community. There is a lack of transitional housing and services for assisting these types of released prisoners who are in need of daily assistance transitioning back into the community.

The California Department of Parole has a system of half-way houses for released paroled offenders who had nowhere to go or needed time to adjust to being in a community after release. The County has nothing comparable, especially for the MS probationers. As of December 31, 2013, there were 682 supervised PRCS and MS probationers who were homeless. Temporary emergency housing is provided at five different locations in the City of Riverside and Southwest Riverside County. No emergency housing is available in the desert communities. Emergency housing is available for up to 30 days, but due to a lack of long term transitional housing, the emergency stays have been extended multiple times for several offenders. As of the date of this report, Probation had 15 supervised individuals in emergency housing.

The Riverside County Board of Supervisors voted in June 2013, to enact an ordinance, establishing a regulatory framework for half-way houses, or places renting to two or more unrelated parolees and probationers. Under the ordinance, the homes would only be allowed by permit in certain commercial and industrial zones. These homes cannot be near where children gather.

Response to Finding 5:

The City partially agrees and partially disagrees with this finding. This finding involves staffing, operations and deployment decisions of Probation, and the City would defer to their determination regarding the management of their respective department.

B. Recommendations

Pursuant to Penal Code Section 933 and Penal Code Section 933.05(b), the City would like to respond to the recommendations of the Grand Jury. However, as stated by Penal Code Section 933, the public agency is to "comment to the presiding judge of the superior court on the findings and recommendations pertaining to matters under the control of the governing body . . . ." (emphasis added). While certain parts of the recommendations pertain to matters not under the control of the City, the City responds to the recommendations as follows:
Recommendation 1.

The Community Corrections Partnership Executive Committee ("CCPEC") should invite the City of Perris and Lake Elsinore to join the Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team ("PACT") program.

Response to Recommendation 1.

The City will not implement the recommendation because it is not warranted. Recommendation 1 pertains to the CCPEC. The City does not participate on the CCPEC and does not receive funding from the CCPEC. This does not relate to East PACT or the City, but instead involves staffing, operations and deployment decisions of Probation and the Sheriff's Department. The cities of Perris and Lake Elsinore are contract communities with law enforcement services provided by the Sheriff's Department. The City would defer to their determinations regarding the management of their respective departments' resources.

Recommendation 2.

Both the Sheriff's Department and the Probation Department shall communicate information on released prisoners placed on Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS) or Mandatory Supervision (MS) from county jails to all law enforcement agencies at the time of the prisoners' release including local police agencies and adjoining counties. An updated summary of prisoner release information shall continue to be communicated to law enforcement agencies weekly and monthly. Probation shall finalize its interface system with the state-wide program for tracking released prisoners on PRCS and MS.

Response to Recommendation 2.

The City will not implement the recommendation because it is not warranted. Recommendation 2 pertains to communicating information. The Sheriff's Department and Probation currently communicate information on the release of PRCS and MS prisoners. The Sheriff's Department and Probation also currently provide quarterly updates at the Coachella Valley Association of Governments meetings. Elected officials and public safety representatives from every municipality in the Coachella Valley, including the City, attend these meetings.

Recommendation 3.

An officer of the Probation Department shall meet with prisoners prior to release and confirm the case plan, residential address and review terms of release at the time of sentencing, and confirm first appointment with Probation officers.
Response to Recommendation 3.

The City will not implement the recommendation because it is not warranted. Recommendation 3 pertains to Probation. This recommendation does not pertain to the City, but instead involves staffing, operations and deployment decisions of Probation and Sherriff’s Department. The City would defer to their determinations regarding the management of their respective departments.

Recommendation 4.

Municipal police agencies in Riverside County without direct Public Safety Enterprise Communication (“PSEC”) capability shall develop and implement a consistent communication system to ensure reliable and seamless coverage between the cities, the Sheriff’s Department, and the safety agencies of other counties.

Response to Recommendation 4.

The City will not implement the recommendation because it is not warranted. Recommendation 4 pertains to consistent communication systems. The City participates in the ERICA which has the ability to “patch” with the PSEC. This patch is utilized frequently to allow for interoperability between the County and ERICA agencies as needed. The best example of the patch working on a large scale operation would be during the annual Coachella and Stagecoach Concert Series in the City.

Recommendation 5

The Probation Department shall oversee the development of half-way houses to provide services to the released supervised inmates to assist them with re-entry into the communities.

Response to Recommendation 5.

The City will not implement the recommendation because it is not warranted. Recommendation 5 pertains to Probation. This recommendation does not pertain to the City, but instead involves staffing, operations and deployment decisions of Probation. The City would defer to their determination regarding the management of their respective department.
In conclusion, this completes the response of the City of Indio.

Sincerely,

THE CITY OF INDIO

Background

In its oversight role, the 2013-2014 Riverside County Grand Jury had the opportunity to review the impact of the Public Safety Realignment Act (AB 109) upon municipal police departments in Riverside County. The Grand Jury is responsible to ensure that local government is serving the best interests of county citizens. This report is an evaluation of released prisoners placed on probation and parole in our county's cities, and areas of improvement are recommended to enhance and address the challenges of an increased number of supervised individuals. During the visits and reviews of evidence, wide variations in the numbers of individuals released into the cities were found. One of the primary functions of city government is to provide public safety services to the residents of the cities. When AB 109 was passed to ease crowding issues in state prisons, this resulted in serious crowding problems in the county's local jails. Various solutions by county government to address local jail overcrowding resulted in serious impact on local municipal police agencies and is the focus of this report.

On October 1, 2011, the State of California implemented AB 109, realigning the state corrections system. It is California's solution for reducing the number of inmates in the state's 33 prisons to 137.5 percent design capacity by May 2013, as ordered by the three-judge court and affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court. The law mandated that individuals in state custody for non-serious, non-violent, non-sex offenses (N3) would be released under county-directed Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS), requiring county probation departments in California to oversee compliance. While the intent of realignment was to relieve over-crowding within the state prisons, the immediate impact at the county level was overwhelming.

No inmates in the state prison were transferred to county jails or released early. However, many prisoners who were released on parole had their parole overseen by the county's PRCS probation department instead of the state parole agency. (See glossary of terms)

Most newly convicted N3 felons in Riverside County (County) are now sentenced to county jail instead of state prison. Due to limited space in Riverside County's five jails, the Riverside County Sheriff (Sheriff) released many N3 felons from the jails under PRCS. Riverside County Probation Department (Probation), as the agency responsible for PRCS, realized the increased caseload strained available resources. Probation is also responsible for the Mandatory Supervision (MS) population. These are offenders who can no longer be sentenced to state prison when convicted of certain felonies.

The County’s Community Correction Partnership (CCP) Executive Committee (CCPEC), charged with development of a 2011 Realignment Implementation, recognized the need for local law enforcement participation in the oversight of these new “AB 109 probationers.” The CCPEC allocated AB 109 funding, $1.4 million, to form a Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team (PACT). The primary mission of PACT is to “work with Probation to immediately focus on high-risk and at-large Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS) offenders that pose the most risk to public safety.” PACT is made up of several municipal police officers to partner with the Sheriff and Probation to deal with increased PRCS population released into local communities. The Chief Probation Officer is the chairman of the CCPEC and the Probation Department serves as the fiscal agent for the PACT funds.

The California Police Chiefs Association (CPCA) began lobbying the governor to address these impacts that realignment has had on local cities and their law enforcement agencies. As a result, the Board of State and Community Corrections (BSCC) provided additional funding to local law enforcement. The funds from the state, $1,536,156, are to be used by the Riverside County’s police chief’s association in any “fashion” it deemed appropriate. In Riverside County, it fell to the Association of Riverside County Chiefs of Police and Sheriff (ARCCOPS) and selected the City of Beaumont to act as the fiscal agent for these BSCC funds. In securing these funds, all parties agreed that decisions on how to best use the funds would be made directly by the local police chiefs and sheriff. ARCCOPS agreed that the BSCC funds shall be used to enhance and improve the current PACT program funded through the CCPEC. The PACT program expanded into three regional teams throughout the County. The teams are identified as WEST-PACT, CENTRAL-PACT, and EAST-PACT. These teams are composed of numerous law enforcement officers from municipal police departments, sheriff deputies, probation officers, district attorney investigators, two police department agencies from cities contracted with the Sheriff’s Department, an Alcohol Tobacco and Firearm (ATF) agent, and on occasion U.S. Customs and Border Protection agents. Funding for the participating police departments who provide an officer and a vehicle on a PACT team will come from either the CCPEC funds distributed by Probation, or the state funds (BSCC) held in account by the City of Beaumont.

In general, the cities were efficient in providing services to the citizens of the cities. However, the following issues were reviewed and recommendations for improvements are provided: Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team (PACT), data sharing between law enforcement agencies, probation department oversight in the five county jails, public safety communication systems, and transitional housing for supervised individuals.
Methodology

- Requested information from city managers of cities with municipal police departments and two cities in the county who contract with the County Sheriff's Department for police services
- Interviewed nine chiefs of police, several assistant chiefs and deputy chiefs, and support staff personnel
- Interviewed seven city managers
- Reviewed AB 109 background and its implementation
- Reviewed state, county and local crime statistics
- Reviewed California Penal Code, recent revisions, and current laws of incarceration
- Interviewed the district attorney and an assistant district attorney
- Interviewed the probation department chief, assistant chief and a deputy chief
- Interviewed the program manager for Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC)
- Reviewed accounting procedures for CCP, CCPEC and BSCC funding to city police departments
- Toured Ironwood State Prison and two county jails
- Reviewed reports from the Association of Riverside County Chiefs of Police and Sheriff (ARCCOPS)

Findings

Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team (PACT) Program

1. Investigation revealed the PACT units have allowed Probation more time and resources to focus on case management and compliance checks on individuals on probation and parole. According to several chiefs of police, the PACT units shared information, served warrants, apprehended PRCS violators and reduced the number of PRCS offenders who abscond.
Further investigation revealed that the PACT units have been highly visible and hold individuals that break the law accountable, regardless of the level of offense. The participating police departments have worked to build infrastructures that support this type of critical enforcement. The police departments stated they have a responsibility to prevent the non-compliant PRCS individuals from re-offending and victimizing the communities.

Initially, when the PACT program began, only cities with their own municipal police departments could participate in PACT activities. With the additional funding from BSCC for the PACT program, the participation of cities who contract for their police services became eligible to participate in the PACT program. Two cities in PACT that contract for police services with the Sheriff's Department are Palm Desert and Moreno Valley. Current participating cities in PACT are shown on Chart B.

In order to be reimbursed for PACT funding and state funding, each of the participating agencies must have committed a full-time sworn officer for whom they are requesting reimbursement for the officer's salary, benefits and vehicle costs. The officer must serve the PACT unit for the entire period in which the agencies are seeking reimbursement. The city must provide the vehicle. The cars that were purchased for PACT activities by several municipal police departments cost $50,000-$60,000 when fully loaded with computers, radios, and other law enforcement equipment. Verification of expenditure(s) is required prior to reimbursement from the fiscal agent. In fiscal years (FY) 2012-13 and 2013-14 the allocated amount was $200,000 for each officer/vehicle per fiscal year for PACT expenses. See Chart C for FY 2012-13 summary of actual reimbursed expenses that were requested by each city. Several cities provide more than one officer and a car, but do not request reimbursement from the fiscal agents. Chart C reflects the first full year CCPEC expenses were reimbursed. The FY for BSCC funding is still in progress.

Probation provides PRCS and Parole non-compliance information to the PACT units. These PACT units are involved in non-compliance sweeps and provided support in conjunction with other PACT units, other task force teams, and also operate in the county's unincorporated areas. PACT member cities also support cities that do not have a PACT member on the PACT. (See Chart E)

Investigation revealed non-reimbursable costs were incurred by the cities to provide an officer to PACT activities (e.g. financial operational support, workers compensation costs and claims processing of PACT officers as well as personnel to process requests for reimbursement funds for the officers). The cities provided these auxiliary services without any compensation due to the specific guidelines between the PACT cities and Probation. Some cities provided a sergeant with a higher salary rather than a lower ranked officer with a lesser salary.

Charts A and D show the percentage of population of a city to the county's total population versus the percentage of the total supervised individuals of a city to the total supervised population in the county. The following cities that have a significantly higher percentage of supervised individuals versus percentage of population are: Riverside, Indio, Hemet, Lake Elsinore, Perris, Palm Springs and Desert Hot Springs. All of these cities provide one or more PACT officers except the City of Perris and Lake Elsinore.

Data Sharing and Supervised Offender Tracking

2. In February, 2012, the ARCCOPS requested that Probation regularly share PRCS offender data with the county's 11 municipal police departments and with the Sheriff who oversees 17 contract cities and unincorporated areas of the County. This information is released minimally on a monthly basis. The list includes the offender's name, address, city, most recent offense and probation officer contact information. The implementation of AB 109 prompted local law enforcement agencies to recognize that they have an important collaborative role to play in support of Probation's efforts to ensure the successful reintegration of this population back into local communities. Currently, Probation provides all local law enforcement agencies a weekly PRCS "Warrant List" for non-compliant probationers as well as monthly reports on all active PRCS and MS individuals. Probation communicates daily with the PACT members as there is a full-time probation officer assigned to each of the three teams. (See Chart B)

California Penal Code §13300 (a) (b) states that the chiefs of police, as well as local law enforcement agencies, have a "need to know" for criminal history information to ensure the safety and security of their duty respective communities.

In March 2013, Probation advised the Riverside County Board of Supervisors via an Update of the local Community Corrections Partnership Public Safety Realignment and Post-release Community Supervision Implementation Plan Update of AB 109 Criminal Justice Alignment, that the Sheriff and Probation developed a joint database system that reduced labor and information technology costs.

Investigation revealed as of the date of this report, there was no county-wide updated and centralized data base for tracking PRCS, MS, and re-arrested probationers. Some police departments have developed their own stand-alone system for their city to internally track repeat offenders as well as non-compliant PRCS and MS individuals. Testimony indicated released offenders frequently travel from city to city and from county to county once they are released from jail. Further testimony indicated that "data sharing is inadequate between Probation and the municipal police departments as well as between contiguous counties." Inconsistent data sharing prevents cities and other entities impacted by AB 109 to ascertain what programs and processes are successful and which ones are not successful.

When state prisoners are paroled, a parole officer confirms the parolees' residential address before prisoners are paroled. When the state prisoners are released from a state correction facility, all law enforcement agencies are notified statewide. If a state prisoner is released from a state facility to PRCS or MS under county probation, the county supervising agency oversees any special conditions for the prisoner's release and notifies all law enforcement agencies. However, when a prisoner is released from a county jail on PRCS or MS, no immediate notification is made to local law enforcement agencies.

Testimony confirmed that currently, when local law enforcement detains a PRCS or MS re-offender, the arresting officer attempts to verify criminal history with the department's "dispatch officer." If the offender is on supervised release and a warrant has been issued for their arrest for non-compliance, they are immediately arrested and the probation officer contacted. At the time of this report the police departments did not immediately receive a formal notification from Probation or Sheriff on offenders who were just released into their cities. This release information is given to the municipal police agencies in the weekly update.

Investigation revealed one of the biggest problems the cities and the County faced when AB 109 was enacted, was that there "wasn't any preparation for a uniform or standardized statistical tracking system." Additional testimony revealed that data sharing is not consistent between Probation and the police departments as well as between counties because the PRCS and MS people moved around and no agency had a centralized database to keep track of these later arrests.

The California Department of Justice has developed a new program that is designed to enable public safety officers to collaborate and share information between all counties and state agencies in tracking individuals on supervised release. Probation is aware of the new program; however, it has not yet met the final data requirements, but is "actively developing measures to become ready."
Probation Officers at Jails

3. Due to overcrowding in the county jails, prisoners are released from the jails at varying times of the day. The deputy sheriffs at the jails are responsible for reviewing the terms and conditions of release which were laid down at the time of a prisoner’s sentencing. This meeting to review the terms of release with the prisoner is done at the jail. No discussion of a “case plan” while on probation is made at this time. A case plan may include follow-up meetings, evaluations needed for re-integration, residency reports and other requirements dictated by the Probation officer. The prisoner is released based on the last known address in the prisoner’s file.

The information for prisoners released on PRCS is communicated to Probation after the prisoner is released. This information includes the prisoner’s residence and contact information at the time of sentencing. There is a disconnect between the time the prisoner is released from jail and when the prisoner makes contact with Probation, sometimes more than two days. Investigation revealed that many times the prisoner’s residence and contact information changed after time was served in jail. Once Probation has the released prisoner’s (now probationer’s) information, it is up to the probationer to contact Probation. If the probationer has not reported into Probation, then a warrant is issued for the probationer for non-compliance of his probation for failing to report in. The warrants for non-compliant probationers are sent from Probation to the respective PACT units for follow-up, adding workload to the team.

Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC)

4. According to Grand Jury investigation the County’s public safety radio network is obsolete and does not reach newer neighborhoods. Today, County law enforcement and other safety officers use the radio more frequently to talk and send data. The Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC) system, recently launched by the Sheriff, has expanded prior coverage and built radio links to other agencies that support the public and safety agencies. This system is not used in all cities in Riverside County.

The new communication system is more comprehensive than the existing systems. When AB 109 was enacted, the public safety agencies throughout the County began seeing an increase in law enforcement activities. Many cities reported a sharp increase in property crimes and a decrease in violent crimes. Criminals and re-offenders crossed city boundaries and often County boundaries. In some areas, the improved communication system of PSEC enabled faster apprehension and arrests of these offenders. Many of the local law enforcement agencies within the County are still using radios with different frequencies and different bands than their neighboring communities. The resultant lack of contact with neighboring law enforcement agencies and counties has resulted in numerous unsuccessful operations. Communication among some County agencies is often lost due to patchwork coverage.

Grand Jury investigation revealed that the PACT was active in the recent pursuit of accused officer Christopher Dorner. WEST-PACT provided communication equipment for many Riverside personnel involved in the investigation and pursuit. This additional equipment allowed Riverside County personnel to communicate with San Bernardino agencies. During the pursuit, many agencies who followed this suspect only had cell phones to call in their location and/or status to local police agencies.

All PACT officers have the PSEC system. However, at the time of this report, non-PACT officers in Palm Springs, Desert Hot Springs, Cathedral City and Murrieta did not have PSEC accessibility. This digital network, which handles voice and data transmissions, has roughly tripled the number of radio towers of the prior analog system and provides coverage to 95 percent of the County, compared to 60 percent under the old network.

Investigation showed that portions of Riverside County currently operate on an 800 MHz radio system that is lacking in full coverage and functionality. Population growth within the County has necessitated the expansion of the coverage footprint. Several smaller cities often have no wide-area coverage. Sometimes different departments in the same city are out of contact.

The Riverside County Information Technology Department oversaw the PSEC rollout, which took seven years to achieve. Many cities that contract with the Sheriff for police services have PSEC, although non-contract cities have limited accessibility to PSEC in event of emergencies.

Transitional Housing

5. In the past two years, approximately 4,500 prisoners have been released from the County jails on some type of supervised release. Investigation revealed that when an inmate had problems with housing, physical or mental issues, it resulted in difficulty in re-entering a community. There is a lack of transitional housing and services for assisting these types of released prisoners who are in need of daily assistance transitioning back into the community.

The California Department of Parole has a system of half-way houses for released paroled offenders who had nowhere to go or needed time to adjust to being in a community after release. The County has nothing comparable, especially for the MS probationers. As of December 31, 2013, there were 682 supervised PRCS and MS probationers who were homeless. Temporary emergency housing is provided at five different locations in the City of Riverside and Southwest Riverside County. No emergency housing is available in the desert communities. Emergency housing is available for up to 30 days, but due to a lack of long term transitional housing, the emergency stays have been extended multiple times for several offenders. As of the date of this report, Probation had 15 supervised individuals in emergency housing.

The Riverside County Board of Supervisors voted in June 2013, to enact an ordinance, establishing a regulatory framework for half-way houses, or places renting to two or more unrelated parolees and probationers. Under the ordinance, the homes would only be allowed by permit in certain commercial and industrial zones. These homes cannot be near where children gather.

1. The Community Corrections Partnership Executive Committee (CCPEC) should invite the City of Perris and Lake Elsinore to join the Post-Release Accountability and Compliance Team (PACT) program.
2. Both the Sheriff's Department and the Probation Department shall communicate information on released prisoners placed on Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS) or Mandatory Supervision (MS) from county jails to all law enforcement agencies at the time of the prisoners' release including local police agencies and adjoining counties. An updated summary of prisoner release information shall continue to be communicated to law enforcement agencies weekly and monthly. Probation shall finalize its interface system with the state-wide program for tracking released prisoners on PRCS and MS.

3. An officer of the Probation Department shall meet with prisoners prior to release and confirm the case plan, residential address and review terms of release at the time of sentencing, and confirm first appointment with Probation officers.

4. Municipal police agencies in Riverside County without direct Public Safety Enterprise Communication (PSEC) capability shall develop and implement a consistent communication system to ensure reliable and seamless coverage between the cities, the Sheriff's Department, and the safety agencies of other counties.

5. The Probation Department shall oversee the development of half-way houses to provide services to the released supervised inmates to assist them with re-entry into the communities.
